County 4-H Club Members Meet

186 Spring Hill, Patmos Youths Review Progress

Interest in 4-H Club work reached a new peak in Springhill and Patmos communities Friday March 6 when 186 boys met and reviewed the progress made in the "Food-for-Victory" Campaign. Plans were made to increase the emphasis on the production of larger quantities of high quality roughage for livestock feed. The 4-H Club members expressed their determination to reach the goals pledged in the "Food-for-Victory" Campaign. Mr. Elmer Brown, Supt. of Patmos Schools, emphasized that 4-H Club members and farmers who make efficient use of the practices in the "Food-for-Victory" Campaign are not only making it possible to increase production and farm income by properly feeding more chickens, hogs and cows but at the same time they are making a contribution toward winning the war no less important than the production of munitions. Mr. Brown outlined the possibilities for 4-H Club members playing a vital role in the production of foods essential in the war effort and urged every member to plan more efficiently and if necessary work around the clock in assuming the increased responsibilities made necessary in the "Food-for-Victory" Campaign.

Barney W. Chambers, Assistant County Agent, put on a demonstration on the mineral requirements of livestock. Mr. Chambers explained the gold farming practices essential to the production of grass and forage high in minerals and proteins.

A New System for Volunteers

Men With Dependents Can Get 4 Months Training

Registrants for Selective Service, who have been deferred because of dependents but are otherwise eligible for military service, volunteering for officer candidate training will be inducted into the Army through their local boards, it was announced Monday by Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Director of Selective Service. Such volunteers, under a new system just authorized by the Secretary of War, will be given four months training in the ranks to determine if they are potential prospects for commissions. Any not recommended for an officer candidate school at the end of this period may request to be transferred to the Enlisted Reserve, which means that he will return to civilian life and not be subject to call for active service unless registrant having similar dependency claims are being called.

Announcing procedure for the induction of Class III-A registrants who volunteer to try for a commission, General Hershey emphasized that they must be American citizens; also that local boards, at their discretion, may reject applications of any who should be deferred as "necessary men" in war production. Volunteers who are under 21 years of age must obtain the written consent of their parents or guardians, he pointed out.

The first step to be taken by a Class III-A registrant desiring to volunteer for officer candidate training, according to procedure outlined by General Hershey in a memorandum to State Directors, is to file with his local board an "Application to Volunteer and Waiver of Dependency," which also must be signed by his dependents. After the board has checked his application, together with his citizenship, educational qualifications, and as to whether or not he is a "necessary man" in his civilian occupation, the registrant is given a preliminary physical examination by the local board examining physician.

If the registrant passes this physical test, he is advised that the next step is to present himself at an Army Reception Center or Army Replacement Center, which will be designated by the Army Corps Area commander, for qualification examination. All expenses incident to travel to and from the reception or replacement center, the memorandum states, must be defrayed by the volunteer registrant, himself, including meals and lodging.

Following the qualification examination by the Army, the registrant returns to his home, regardless of whether or not he is found to be acceptable, and presents the Army report to his local board. If the registrant has been rejected for officer candidate training, his application to volunteer is rejected by his local board and he is retained in Class III-A. If he has been found acceptable by the Army, he is placed in Class I-A, and will be ordered to report for induction as a volunteer for officer

BEER HAS AN HONORABLE PLACE IN AMERICA'S HISTORY

Here is What the Beer Industry is Doing to Uphold that Tradition!
When this Committee was organized two years ago, we made a pledge to the people of Arkansas that we were breaking, wherever it involves the sale of beer in Arkansas, MUST STOP!

To date, the Committee has inspected more than 2,000 retail beer places. Only a few—68—were found out of line with the high standards of Arkansas' valuable beer industry. When this Committee cited this minority to law enforcement authorities, their licenses were revoked. A beer license is no shield for irresponsibles!

U.S. Combating Enemy Aliens

More and More Are Being Arrested Every Day

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON — It is becoming more likely that some drastic—and I mean drastic—congressional action will be taken soon to provide government agencies with new weapons to combat fifth columnists and spies. There is no serious criticism of the work being done by existing agencies. But ever since Pearl Harbor, there has been a growing list of discovered fifth column activities. FBI agents recently picked up more than 50 suspects in Dallas county. Texts, with cameras, radio, weapons. Thirteen German and Italian aliens, all purportedly in possession of multi-lens and other suspicious equipment, were picked up near an important airplane factory in New Jersey.

There was a series of similar arrests in New Orleans. In San Antonio, suspects were caught with code books, maps of vital military establishments, binoculars, weapons and maps.

In Norfolk, Va., federal agents arrested German and Italian aliens with short wave receiving sets, cameras and ammunition. Spy trials in New York and Washington have brought out alarming testimony as to pre-war activity of enemy agents.

On the West Coast, civilian observers stated that just before the submarine shelling near Santa Barbara, lights flashed from the hills as if signaling a ship at sea. An employee of the Navy Magazine at Bellevue, District of Columbia, was arrested on a traffic charge and through an error was searched. Police said they found secret bomb mechanisms, a list of consignments of ammunition to several defense posts.

The deluge has given Washington officials the jitters. Already the necessity for a search and seizure warrant in spy cases has been removed. By executive order and justice department rulings, other restrictions against counter-espionage work have been lifted. From the West Coast particularly come complaints that existing measures are inadequate.

Asked a high counter-espionage official where he thought the real problem lies.

"Espionage can be fought effectively," he said. "It is the so-called fifth column that is the real problem. A food fifth columnist is a model citizen. His very effectiveness depends on it. He may even be contributing to our war effort while waiting to give aid and assistance to the enemy."

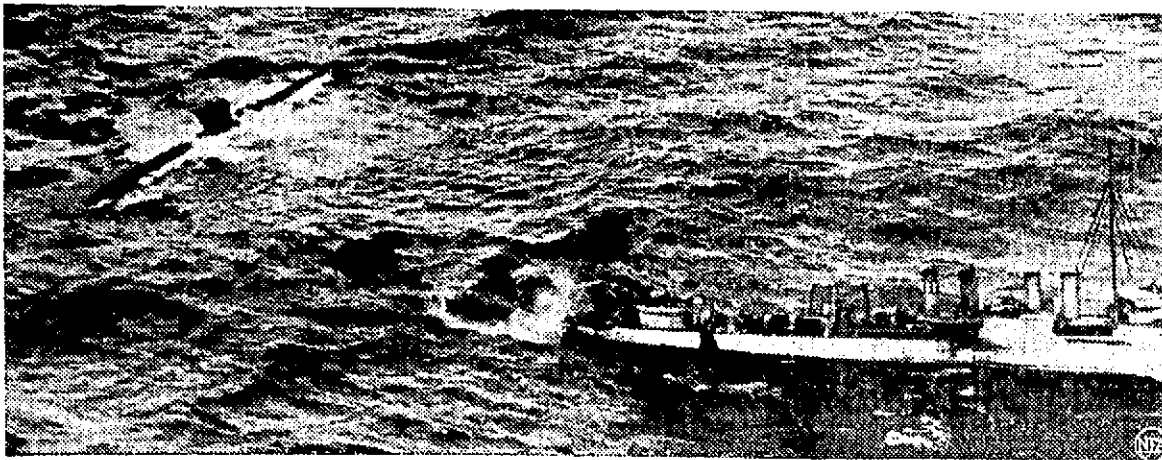

"With existing laws, we can deal with the spies and saboteurs, but how do we handle the fifth columnists without starting a nationwide witch-hunt is another problem."

"A lot of Washington observers are saying now that the United States

Their submarine blasted out from under them during an attack on an Atlantic convoy, these German sailors above, managed to escape from the wrecked craft and start swimming toward the British destroyer which scored the hit. The picture was just received. The submarine was reportedly one of three sunk by the Allies during a recent five-day battle between the convoy and the enemy. The airplane photo, right, shows a British destroyer standing by to rescue the crew of another U-boat put out of action in a different engagement.

DRAKE—AT WORK
CHAPTER XXIII
"LOOK at me, Mr. Monaghan, I look like a tramp. I'll be a bum if somebody doesn't give me a job."
"Turner'll give you a job, if you'll take it."
"I'll take it."
"I'll get you a job, Drake. You can depend on me."
"Thank you—sir."
Drake arose. "I'm going home." He turned at the door. "If I get a job down here, I'm going to sell the place uptown. It's already mortgaged. Then I'll have a little bit of money anyhow. I'm going to come down here somewhere to live."
"And say—"
"Yes, sir?"
"You'll have to cut out likker."
"Why, Drake! What are you doing here?" Randy came cheerfully into the room.
Drake flushed darkly. "Yes, I know how I look, Randy. I was in the calaboose last night."
"Drake! What did you do?"
"Drunk. I wasn't arrested. Sam Winters just—just locked me up so I wouldn't freeze."
"Oh, Drake!"
"It won't happen again, Randy. Your pa's going to get me a job of some kind."
Randy's glance veiled a little. It was a strange look—Drake didn't understand it. It was a far-away look, almost impersonal, but steady as a lamp set on stone.
"Go up stairs. I'll bring you some hot water. You wash and shave, and I'll fix you something to eat. Then you're going to bed and get some sleep."
Drake went heavily up the stairs. Mr. Monaghan knocked the ashes from his pipe. He had never quite known what to make of his tomboy daughter, but at this moment he felt that he understood her better. She looked exactly like her mother as she stood watching Drake.

MR. MONAGHAN kept his word, and Drake kept his. Mat Turner, an old acquaintance of Drake's Uncle Rhodes, was reluctant at first. He didn't believe too much in the earnestness and sincerity of Drake's resolution, but Monaghan persuaded him. Drake was given a nondescript job as switchman, and general helper around the freight office. He never set foot in Fritz Bachman's lunchroom again, or took another drink. The bank sold the Livingston house, and Drake paid his debts. There wasn't much left but Drake put it in the bank and managed to live on his wages. He had a room at Mrs. Blake's railroad boardinghouse, and spent as much time with Randy as possible.

Drake lost his casual, laughing manner, and a part of his good looks was lost with it. He wasn't happy, and showed it. But he was healthier-looking.

He had never seen Louise Gordon again. The thought of her crossed his mind once in a while—a tingling anger mixed with a faint desire.

"THE twentieth century" was beginning to be a familiar phrase. At first it had a fabulous sound, like a connotation of some fantastic future. But one became a little accustomed to it as one learned to write 1900 and 1901 without too much hesitation.

The outward changes in Kings Row, taking place gradually as they did, were not too violent to disturb even conservative people much. Of course, if one stopped to think about it, a lot of things had happened. Trees gone from the courthouse square, and from Union street as far as the Methodist church. Lots of bright new paint and plate-glass store windows.

"A smart little city," Hart Sansome said. "As neat and bright as a pin."

"Looks like every town its size from Ohio to Kansas," Miles Jackson said. "You can't tell by looking around if you're in Indiana or Iowa. Looks like any town—and just as ugly."

But everyone noticed that since the death of his old enemy, Colonel Skeffington, Miles Jackson was less acid.

DRAKE McHUGH developed a bad cold and laid off from work for nearly a week. He spent most of the time with Randy.

One evening after supper he was on his way back to his boardinghouse. He took the short cut through the freight yards as usual. Bill Hockinson was running the switch engine, shifting boxcars for the early freight train the next day. Drake stepped off the track as Bill passed with a dozen empty flats. He waved and Bill shouted something that could not be heard above the rattle and clash of wheels rolling over the switches. He saw Bill waving frantically, and grinned. Some rowdy joke that wouldn't wait.

Harley Davis, brakeman on the regular freight run to Camperville, slammed the door of the freight office open. Arnold Schultz, the freight agent, grabbed his blowing papers. "Say! What in the hell—"

Fighter Flynn Saves Self for Acting

HOLLYWOOD — Uneasiness about air raids, or at least about blackouts, has halted virtually all outdoor movie-making at night, with the result that sound stages now hold sets which never before have been attempted under roofs. This makes the financial supervisors sad, but they'd be unhappy yet if a big location company operating on fancy night wages happened to be immobilized by the yowl of the sirens.

On Warner's Stage 16, which is almost as large as a football field, an impressive bit of the Netherlands has been reproduced. There are a river, a large wooden bridge, grassy banks and wooden hills, on both sides. For distant vistas, painted scenery covers the walls on all sides.

The picture, "Desperate Journey," is about a bomber-load of R. A. F. flyers being shot down in Germany and making their way back by devious routes and methods. Errol Flynn and Ronald Reagan are the leads. Some of the extras are uniformed as German soldiers, and they're not enjoying it. I heard a corporal (Swedish) complaining to a private (Irish): "Tomorrow I'm gonna change clothes before I go to lunch. The way people look at me, I can't eat."

The private said, "Yeah, but it don't bother me. I keep thinking how in another week I'll have a complete change of costume—and the wardrobe man will be a supply sergeant up at Fort Ord, or wherever the Army's sending me."

Director Raoul Walsh called the cast together for the next scene. Here's the action," he explained. "Flynn and Reagan are crouched there in the bushes as these German soldiers come along the road. You wait until they pass. Then comes this straggler. You let him get right here, and then Reagan jumps out and bats him on the head with the butt of his pistol. Don't kill him, but make it look good. He falls. You both grab him and drag him off the road. It's gotta be fast. You got it?"

Reagan asked in amazement: "You mean that with Flynn in the picture I actually got to hit a guy? My, my! Up to now I didn't believe what they said about my being co-starred in this show."

"Wh, Ronnie, you get to do all the fighting," jeered Flynn. "They are saving me for the acting!"

Tear jerkers

Barbara Stanwyck and Nancy Coleman were sitting in a wine cellar getting plastered. The picture is "The Gay Sisters," but it isn't a comedy. It's about the decline of a family and the decadence of a mansion, and here were the two gals trying to drink up the last of the wine before they had to move from the house. Luckily the big vault was almost empty. In 20 years a lot of Gaylor wine had flowed under the bridges of numerous patrician noses.

After a bit of maudlin dialog, Miss Coleman suggested a good cry. There upon she and Miss Stanwyck broke into tears. They wept and sobbed

Nickel Magazines Go to a Dime in April

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. —(AP)— Price of the Saturday Evening Post will be increased from five cents to 10 cents, effective with the issue of April 11, the Curtis Publishing Company announced this week-end. The subscription rate by the year will rise from $2 to $3 with the same issue. The Post has been selling for five cents for more than a century.

"The Post has remained at five cents far longer than publishing conditions justified," Walter D. Fuller, president of the company said. "The tendency in the magazine field for some time has been to a price of 10 or 15 cents."

In New York, Liberty Magazine announced a similar increase from five to 10 cents, effective with the April 18 issue, on sale April 8. "Due to the rising paper cost, we will make the increase next month," the statement said.

whirl of inflation and depression inter flattened the farmers. Mortgage foreclosures ripped the security supposed to go with possession of land, riots in the midwest stopped foreclosure sales and agricultural instability reeked the nation.

These opponents see a repetition, which certainly would be an economic jolt difficult to withstand in post-war years with a heavy armament bill. Other economists and farm leaders assert the brakes in the price control bill would prevent such a catastrophe.

The general public should be more concerned with the probable effect upon the total war effort. If the Bankhead would seriously block the war drive then it should never go on the books. If, on the other hand, it would merely provide agriculture with a more equitable share of the national wealth, then it cannot be seriously opposed.

Most important, nothing should be permitted that would in any way divide the country, group against group. The idea that city slickers are attempting to take bread from farmers' mouths or that the agricultural interests seek to boost living costs out of sight should be squelched.

Anything bound to hinder the victory drive is just as bad for farmers as for city wage earners. The forces battling over the Bankhead amendment should at once settle on some reasonable compromise before our enemies get more consolation from our bickering in the home front.
